

To whome it may concern,

Miss Stroug was my fifth grade language arts teacher during the 2014-2015 school year. She was also my third grade teacher two years ago. I always found her serious, but fun. I remember when she showed us how to make creases after the ISAT test. She would sometimes give me origami paper to use at home. At the end of the year, she had us write the title of our favorite Allen Say book she read to us. She gave us each the book we said was our favorite, and she wrote a note to us in each one. That year was so important to me, I never used the last of my origami paper and I put it in the book. The book is safe and sound in a drawer in my room. I knew it was going to be the best year in elementary school of my life.

Sincerely,
Elizabeth

P.S.

She is the reason
I know how to write in cursive.
